LIVELY VILLAGE ELECTION

People's Party Wins Out With Their Entire Ticket By Substantial Majority

TOTAL VOTE CAST WAS 357

Even the cold rain and strong wind of last Tuesday failed to dampen or cool the ardor of the various supporters of the two tickets that were in the field. Even though the village streets were a river of mud autos hurried to and fro all day bringing the voters to the village hall, never once quitting the job until the closing of the poles. Workers for both factions were on the job at an early hour and it was a straight fight to the finish, with each side confident of victory until the votes were counted and it was found that the Peoples party had won out with their entire ticket.

The official figures are as follows:

Mends Granite [illegible] Ware.

The government suggests we economize on kitchen utensils. To mend a hole in granite ware work a piece of putty until perfectly soft, then take a piece of the putty large enough to cover the hole and put one piece on either side of the metal, pressing together inside and out, smoothing down the edges. Place the vessel in a slow oven and bake until the putty is a deep brown. For containing water the vessel will be as good as new.

To Remove Paint.

Paint stains that are not fresh and yet have not entirely hardened can be softened by moistening them with ammonia and sprinkling them with a little turpentine. Roll the fabric up for fifteen or twenty minutes or soak it for several hours if necessary and then wash it with warm water and soap and hang it out in the air to remove the turpentine odor.

Auto Thieves in Farm Raid Gets Four Calves

Men in a Ford truck, believed to be Waukeganites or North Chicagoans, went to the Paul Dubey farm near Hendee station west of Libertyville on Friday night and stole from the field, four calves. One calf was to large to carry off alive so the thieves cut its throat as the blood on the field later showed.

A dog on the place made a disturbance and members of the Dubey family gave chase to the unusual thieves as they made off toward the east. They followed their car almost to Waukegan but they lost the trail.

Death of Mrs. Charles Cornish, of Solon

The Jos. Fillweber family were called to Solon this week by the death of Mrs. Fillweber's mother, Mrs. Cornish who passed away on Menday last at the age of eighty-two years.

Nancy Jane Sutton was born on Sept. 30, 1837, in Utica, N. Y. and died on April 14, 1919 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Vogel of Solon Mills, with whom she has lived for the past eighteen years.

She was united in marriage on July 2, 1856, to Charles H. Cornish at Lee Center, N. Y. Shortly after their marriage they moved to this state and settled at Solon where the remainder of their lives were spent.

To this union were born four children one of whom died in infancy, the others Wm. Cornish and Mrs. George Vogel of Solon Mills and Mrs. Joseph Fillweber of this village are left to mourn her loss. She is also survived by nine grand children and thirteen great grand children.

Emil Ficke Elected Chairman Supervisors

Emil Ficke, supervisor of Ela township was last week unanimously elected chairman of the supervisors for the year 1919-20.

George Bairstow, Waukegan, was selected as temporary chairman after Clerk Hendee called the new board to order and read the call. All of the board excepting Hutton and Burgess were present. The only two new members are: Conrad Hollstein, Waukegan and Ed Brown, Round Lake, Avon township.

Ringdahl nominated Mr. Ficke for permanent chairman and Vercoe moved the selection be unanimous when no other nominations were heard. Thereupon the board voted unanimously for Mr. Ficke and he assumed the chairmanship.

Mr. Ficke, the new chairman was born April 10, 1862. He was elected supervisor from Ela in 1908 and has served continuously since, having held various positions of importance as chairman of the big committee. It is noted that Mr. Ficke's election as chairman came on his 58th birthday a rather coincidental circumstance.

The board voted to allow a claim of $300 to the town of Cuba for expenses in combating the flu epidemic at Barrington last fall, it being explained by Kirchner that Cook county had already assumed its one-half share.

Elam Clarke addressed the board in behalf of the Victory Loan Drive asking the board to lend financial assistance to the work in Lake county. At the last drive the board appropriated $1,500 for the work. Dilger moved to refer to new finance committee.

DUANE AGAIN COMES TO RESCUE AS DAPHNE SEES HER CHANCE TO BECOME A STAR SLIPPING AWAY.

Synopsis.—Clay Wimburn, a young New Yorker on a visit to Cleveland, meets pretty Daphne Kip, whose brother is in the same office with Clay in Wall street. After a whirlwind courtship they become engaged. Clay buys an engagement ring on credit and returns to New York. Daphne agrees to an early marriage, and after extracting from her money-worried father what she regards as a sufficient sum of money for the purpose she goes to New York with her mother to buy her trousseau. Daphne's brother, Bayard, has just married and left for Europe with his bride, Leila. Daphne and her mother install themselves in Bayard's flat. Wimburn introduces Daphne and her mother to luxurious New York life. Daphne meets Tom Duane, man-about-town, who seems greatly attracted to her. Daphne accidentally discovers that Clay is penniless, except for his salary. Baynard and his wife return to New York unexpectedly. The three women set out on a shopping excursion and the two younger women buy expensive gowns, having them charged to Bayard. Bayard is furious over the expense, seeing hard times ahead. Daphne, indignant, declares she will earn her own living and breaks her engagement with Clay. Through an introduction by Duane, Daphne induces Reben, a theatrical magnate, to give her a position in one of his companies.

Miss Kemble went forward to Daphne and took her hand and petted it and said: "I'm so glad to see you. You must meet my aunt, Mrs. Vining. She won't object to your playing her parts, I'm sure."

Mrs. Vining, who had played all manner of roles for half a century, [illegible] now established as a famous [illegible]ful old grandes dames, [illegible] ready vinegar and [illegible] his [illegible]

Th[illegible] on a chai[illegible] of two broken imaginary newspape[illegible] Bat[illegible] "Doorbell! Buzz-z."

A well-dressed young man, whom Daphne recognized as the elderly butler, walked across and opened an imaginary door between two chairs. This was the cue for Miss Kemble's famous "How do you do?"

Everybody waited and watched for the newcomer to make her debut in the new world. Then was a silence. Daphne stood with heels screwed to the floor and tongue glued to the roof of her mouth.

"All right, Miss Kip," said Batterson with ominous patience. "Come on, come on, please!"

Another silence, then Daphne laughed and choked. "I'm awfully stupid. I've forgotten the line."

Batterson gnashed his unlighted cigar and growled: "Howjado! Howjado!"

"Oh, yes! Thank you. I'm so sorry!" said Daphne, and walked on at the wrong side of the chairs.

Everybody shuddered to realize that she had entered through a solid wall. This miracle was ignored, but there was no ignoring the peculiarly ineloquent note she struck when she bowed to the butler and stammered:

"How are you?"

A sigh went through the vast profound and void of the empty theater. Instinct told even the echoes that Daphne did not belong and never could belong. Batterson groaned, tragically.

"Not to the butler, please! Don't say 'How are you?' to the butler. Don't say 'How are you?' to anybody, please. Script says 'Howjado?' Say 'Howjado?' to Mr. Eldon there. Say 'Howjado' to Mr. Eldon there."

"How do you do?" said Daphne, bowing to Eldon and speaking with a soullessness of a squeezed doll.

Eldon rose, folded up his imaginary paper, and came forward with a pitying desire to help her. He hoped that the scared little Kip woman would win through the same bitter trials to the same perilous and always endangered success. But he had a fear.

He delivered her his line with benevolent gentleness. He waited, then gave her her line with exquisite tact. She did not repeat it after him. He said to her:

"Don't be afraid; you're all right."

He gave her the line again and she parroted it after him. She leaped then to a speech several minutes farther on. He drew her back to the cue:

"Pardon me, but I think I have a line before that."

The rehearsal blundered on. It was not Daphne's fright that disturbed the rest. It was her complete failure to suggest the character, or any character.

But Batterson found nothing to amuse him, and Reben tasted that dust and ashes of disappointment with which theatrical managers are so familiar when they bite on the Dead sea fruit of beauty without dramatic talent.

Miss Kemble tried to help. She asked Daphne to step aside and watch while she went through the scene. But she was so unnerved that she forgot her own lines and had to refer to the manuscript, while Eldon waited in acute distress and Daphne, looking on, said: "Oh, I see. I think I understand it now." Then she forgot it all again at the repetition. Somehow the rehearsal was worried through to the end and Batterson dismissed the company with sarcastic thanks. Then he went to Reben to demand a substitute.

Daphne went home, dreading her fate but not knowing what the verdict [illegible]. She felt sure that it would be [illegible]uilty of dramatic ability. She [illegible]t with the exposure of [illegible]nd uncer[illegible] her [illegible]certain which she [illegible]ore—to be dismissed or [illegible]d. The latter meant un[illegible]

[illegible] elevator she found Tom [illegible] He had just telephoned up [illegible] the apartment to ask if she were in. There was a welcome flattery in his frank delight. She asked him up. Tom Duane was electric with cheer. He praised Daphne with inoffensive heartiness and insisted on hearing the history of her progress. She gave the worst possible account of her stupidity. He would have none of her self-depreciation.

"Everything's got to begin," he said. "Some of the greatest actors are bad at rehearsal, and never get over it. Some of the greatest actresses always are at their worst on the first performance. You're bound to succeed. You have beauty and charm and grace and magnetism no end. Don't worry. I'll speak to Reben and make him restrain Batterson. We'll make a star of you yet."

There was a fine reassurance in that word "we" in spite of its pleasant tang of impudence. It gave her strength to go to the telephone and call up Reben. She came back in despair and collapsed on the divan.

Tom Duane was at her side instantly. "You're ill! In heaven's name, what can I do?"

His solicitude pleased her. She smiled palely: "Mr. Reben told me he was afraid I'd better give up the job.

He Gave Her a Hand-Grip of Perfect Good Fellowship.

He was very polite and awfully sorry, but he said he didn't think I was quite suited to the work. He said that later, perhaps, there might be another chance, but—oh—oh—oh!"

She was crying with all her might. Gradually she realized that Duane's hands were on her shoulders. He was squeezing them as if to keep her from sobbing herself to pieces. His face was close to hers, and he was murmuring:

"You poor little thing. You mustn't grieve. You've to fine and too beautiful for such work."

She flung herself free. "No, no; I'm an imbecile—I'm no good—that's all."

Those big hands were at her shoulders again. That soothing voice was ministering courage and praise:

"You are not no good. You shall succeed! I'll make Reben take you back. I've helped Reben out when he was in trouble. I've lent him money and I'll make him give you your chance. I promise that, on my word!"

She stared at him through her tears. They blurred him in dancing flashes of light as if he were a sun god. She caught his hands from her shoulders, but she had to hold them in hers. She was drowning, and she must cling to whatever arms stretched down to her. She must not question whose they were till she was safe again on the solid earth.

Duane was laughing now and patting her on the back as if she were a frightened child. She felt no right to rebuke his caresses. They were such as a brother might give a sister. His arm about her was that of a comrade, sustaining another in a battle.

He was the only one in the world who offered her courage and praise and help in her need.

Duane said, with a matter-of-fact briskness: "I'll call Reben up at once. No, I'll go see him."

"But you put me under such obligations. I'm afraid—"

"Never be afraid of an obligation."

"I'm afraid I can never repay it."

"Then you're one ahead. But you can repay me and you will."

"How?"

"Let's wait and see. Goodby. Don't worry."

He gave her a hand-grip of perfect good fellowship and went into the hall. She followed him to tell him again how kind he was. As she was clasping his h[illegible] and again Leila opened the door with her latchkey.

Now there was triple embarrassment. Tom Duane had paid ardent court to Leila before she married Bayard. Here he was in Bayard's wife's home, apparently flirting with Bayard's young sister.

Leila felt all the outraged sentiments of jealousy and all the indignation of a chaperon who has been circumvented. Duane retreated in poor order. Daphne stammered an explanation too brief and muddled to suffice. Then she went to her room.

There her mother found her when she came in later. Daphne had only a faint hope that Duane could work his miracle twice, so she told her mother that she had failed as an actress. She told her bluntly:

"Mamma, I've been fired."

To her comfort her mother caught her to her ample bosom and said: "I'm glad of it. I'm much obliged to whoever is to blame. Not but what you could have succeeded if you had kept at it. But you're too good for such a wicked life. A person couldn't be an actor without being insincere and a pretender, and my little girl is too honest. So now you come along home with me."

"No, thank you, mamma."

Mrs. Kip gathered herself together for a vigorous assault when the telephone rang and the maid brought word that a gent'man wished to speak with Miss Daphne.

It was Duane, and she braced herself for another blow. But his voice was clarion with success.

"I've seen Reben. It's all right. He's promised to keep you on and give you a chance. He says for you to report at the theater at seven-thirty tonight."

And now again Daphne was more afraid of her success, such as it was, than of her failure. But it was pleasant to carry the news to her mother and Leila.

It disgusted them both. They were still trying to dissuade her from continuing on the downward path when a telegram from her father came for her mother:

"Taking beaver arrive Grand Central tomorrow don't meet me love.
"WES."

Bayard was late, as usual, and Leila's temper had just begun to simmer when the door was opened stealthily and a hand was thrust in. It proffered a small box of jeweler's size and waved it like a flag of truce.

Leila rushed forward with a cry of delight, seized the packet and then the hand, and drew Bayard into the room and into her arms.

"This is your apology, I suppose," she said.

"Yes, the apology for being late, and that's what made me late."

Leila was enraptured. She adored gifts and she had the knack of inspiring them. The little square parcel provoked her curiosity. She opened it so excitedly that the contents fell to the floor. She swooped for them and brought up a platinum chain with a delicate plaque of tiny diamonds and pearls on a device of platinum.

Leila ran to Mrs. Kip and Daphne, exclaiming: "Aren't they beautiful? Aren't they wonderful? Aren't they glorious?"

Mrs. Kip and Daphne tried to keep the pace, but once more they could not forget who it was that was raining down gold on this greedy stranger. Their alarm was not diminished when Bayard said to Leila:

"You're not the only one who can open accounts. I started one for those."

He took from his pocket a pale brochure and said to Leila: "That allowance we agreed on, you know?"

"Yes, I know."

"Well, instead of paying it to you week by week I decided to open a bank account for you; so I ran over to this bank at the lunch hour and made a deposit to your credit—five hundred dollars!"

Leila forgot her jewelry for a moment in this new pride. She strutted about with mock hauteur, waving Mrs. Kip and Daphne aside and saying: "Don't speak to me. I am a lady with a bank account."

Mrs. Kip sighed in dreary earnest, "That's more than I ever was."

Leila was poring over her bank book, the blank pages in which so many dramas, tragedies and life histories could be codified in bald numerals.

Her first question was ominous: "Do I have to go all the way down to Broad street every time I want to draw out some money?"

Her first thought was already to attack the integrity of her store.

"No, dearest," said Bayard, "there is an uptown branch, right around the corner. But I hope your visits there will be more for a put-in than take-out. Every time I give you anything I want you to put some of it aside. Maybe some day I'll want to borrow some of it for a while. Maybe you can save me from [illegible] crash some day. Anyhow, it will be a great help to me to feel that I have a thrifty little wife at home. A man has to plunge a good deal in business. It's his wife that usually makes him or breaks him."

Bayard spoke with unusual solemnity: "Old Ben Franklin said, 'A shilling earned and sixpence spent, a fortune. Sixpence earned and a shilling spent, bankruptcy'—or something like that. But Moses got ahead of him. When he hand[illegible] down the Ten Commandments he w[illegible] extra one to be the private [illegible] chosen people."

"What was it?" said Leila with a minimum of interest.

"Thou shalt not spend all thou earnest," said Bayard. "It was—well, it was the Thirteenth Commandment, I guess—a mighty unlucky one to break. The Jews have kept it pretty well. They've been the bankers of the world even while they were persecuted."

Leila shrugged her handsome shoulders and studied the gems.

"Let's not talk about it tonight. Let's dine somewhere and go to the theater. I want to show off my new splendor."

"Fine!" said Bayard, trying to cast away his forebodings and lift himself by his own boot straps. "Get on your duds mother, you and Daphne."

"I can't go," said Daphne. "I've got to be at the fun-factory at half past seven and I've hardly time to eat anything."

While Leila and Bayard and Mrs. Kip were putting on their festal robes Daphne was eating alone a hasty meal brought up tardily from the restaurant.

Before they were dressed she had to march out in what she called her working clothes. The hallman ran to call her a taxicab, but she shook her head. Her humble twenty-five dollars a week would not justify a chariot to and from the shop.

She walked rapidly along Fifty-ninth street, but not rapidly enough to escape one or two murmurous gallants.

She found Batterson quarreling with a property man over the responsibility for a broken vase. He ignored her till at length she ventured to stammer:

"Here I am, Mr. Batterson."

"So I see. Well, sit down somewhere."

Finding a seat was no easy task. Every piece of furniture she selected became at once the object of the scene shifter's attack and she had to take flight.

Members of the company strolled in, paused at the mailbox and went to their various cells.

Eventually Batterson found that all the company was on hand and in good health. He said to Daphne, "Everybody is here and nobody sick, so you needn't stay after the curtain goes up."

But she wanted to learn her trade, so she loitered about, feeling like an uninvited poor relation. CHAPTER XI.

[illegible]e woke early next morning. It [illegible] just six o'clock. She remembered [illegible] her father would be arriving in [illegible] hours. She decided that it would [illegible] a pleasant duty to surprise the [illegible]oor, old, neglected codger by meeting him.

At the Grand Central station Daphne found that she was nearly an hour too early for the train. It amused her to take her breakfast at the lunch counter, to clamber on the high stool and eat the dishes of haste—a cup of coffee and a ham sandwich. It was pleasant to wander about alone in this atmosphere of speed, the suburban trains, like feed pipes, spouting streams of workers, the out-bound trains drawing their passengers to far-off destinies as if by suction.

At length it was time for the train. Daphne went to the rope barrier opposite the door of entry and waited in ambush for her father.

At length she made out a rather shabby man carrying his own luggage. It was her father. He looked older and seedier than she remembered. He did not expect to be met. He was looking idly at the new station. He had not been to New York since it had been thrown open.

She ran to him. He dropped his old suitcase on the toes of the man following him and embraced Daphne with fervor. He devoured her with his eyes and kissed her again and told her that she was prettier than ever. All about them there were little groups embracing and kissing. There was a wonderful business in reunions.

When her father said, "I haven't had my breakfast; have you?" she lied affectionately, "No."

"Let's have some breakfast together."

"Fine," said Daphne. "We'll go to the Biltmore."

"Kind of expensive, isn't it?" he asked anxiously.

"It's my treat," she said.

This amused him enormously. "So you're going to treat, eh?"

"Yep," she said.

"Where did you get all the money?"

"I'm a working lady now."

He laughed again and shook his head over her.

"What did you mean by saying you were a working lady?" said Wesley when they were seated at the table and breakfast was ordered. "Your mother wrote me something about having a little disagreement with you. She seemed to be right worried, so I thought I'd better run on to see if I couldn't sort of smooth things over. I'm glad you came to meet me. We can talk without interruption for once. Tell me all about it."

She told him the whole story of her decision to join the great social revolution that is freeing women from the slavery of enslaving the men. Her peroration was her new watchword: "I don't want to take any more money from you."

"Why, honey," he protested, "I love to give it to you. I only wish I had ten times as much. I couldn't dream of letting you work. You're too pirty. What's that young Wimburn cub mean by letting you work?"

"Oh, he's bitterly opposed to it, so I gave him his ring."

At last Daphne gets the chance that she has hoped for and at the same time has dreaded—the chance to gain a place that will give her the independence she seeks. What Daphne did with the great chance when it came is told in the next installment.

SYSTEM THAT WAS USED IN MUSTERING OUT OUR ARMY MEN

Chief of Staff Says Home Folks Do Not Understand Methods.

BIG PROBLEMS TO SOLVE

Why the Old Draft Boards Could Not Be Used—Provision Supplied for All Those in Distress—Bonus Given to Discharged Men.

Washington.—The war department authorizes the following statement from the office of the chief of staff:

The present system of demobilization does not seem to be understood by the people of the country. As a fundamental starting point, let us assume that all the selected service men who have been inducted into the service during the war were removed from their home communities at one time, and that upon their departure, and until their return conditions of labor and industry did not change in the slightest respect in any portion of the country. Again let us assume that the conditions of labor and industry having remained exactly the same, all these selected service men were returned at the same moment to the niches previously held by them in civil life. Under such assumptions the entire operation would have been performed without the slightest jar to the industrial conditions of the country.

This would be an ideal condition, but it is based on an utterly absurd hypothesis. The selected service men were not all inducted into [illegible] the service at one time. Nor did the conditions of labor and industry remain unchanged after their departure from their home districts.

Tremendous Problem.

Could the history of each particular job from which employed men had been withdrawn be traced, could it be discovered whether the job remained open to him or whether A's job had been filled by B; could it be definitely ascertained that B left a job which remains open to A; it might be possible, were these returning men so many spare parts of a machine, to assign each returning man a definite job. But they are not spare parts of a machine. They are human beings, influenced on the one hand by home ties, and on the other by varying desires and ambitions; and if no positions which they want are immediately open to them, they, as well as the original unemployed, must be gradually absorbed in the industrial life of the nation.

This, then, is the tremendous problem that confronts us—to return to a country whose digestion for labor is not now of the best hundreds of thousands of men without employment, not forgetting that they and their families deserve the grateful thanks of the nation, and remaining keenly aware that their patriotism and sacrifice demand that they be given every possible recognition and favor.

Certain Specific Laws.

As certain specific laws govern the discharge of soldiers, and their interests as well as those of the government must be jealously guarded, the use of local draft boards for the entire demobilization of the army would, among other things, involve the following: Necessary commissioned and enlisted personnel for the preparation of all records of each man discharged; for the reception, storing, care and shipment of all government equipment turned in by him; for his physical examination and final payment. There would also be needed facilities for housing and feeding men, including hospital treatment, while awaiting discharge.

The machinery necessary at each one of the local draft boards would depend upon the amount of work which it would be required to do. About 4,680 local draft boards would have to be provided with this necessary personnel and other facilities mentioned above. The machinery of each local draft board would have to be maintained intact as long as there were in the service men from the particular district involved, and would have to be kept at such strength as to be able to handle such men as were sent to it for discharge at any time.

The difficulties of transportation from the port to local draft boards, assuming the abandonment of the present demobilization camps, would be materially increased.

The question then arises: If local draft boards cannot be used for complete discharge of the soldier, cannot they be used in conjunction with present camps? And the answer is that it is not feasible.

The present system of demobilization is that certain camps and cantonments throughout the country have been designated as demobilization centers. These centers are provided with personnel, temporarily retained in the service, for the operation of the machinery of discharge. This system of demobilization necessitates the splitting up of organizations upon arrival from overseas and their distribution in small groups to the various demobilization centers.

Experience of Other Nations.

The suggestion has been made that we pattern our demobilization system after that of Great Britain. The United States, in formulating its plans for mobilization, was fortunate enough to have profited by some of the costly experiences of others, and by a systematic classification prevented men from being sent to the trenches who later had to be withdrawn and returned to industries essential to the prosecution of the war. In carrying out its systematic draft system, the tendency was to retain in the industrial world the pivotal or key men, the return of whom to their normal activities in the industrial world appears to be one of the outstanding principles in the British demobilization system. The war department has consistently declined to discharge our selected service men by classes, the needs of industry having been recognized in the selective service law.

In many families distress exists. Certain men are indispensable to industry. To enable such men to be released, the war department has issued a circular to all commanders covering their cases.

The secretary of war has also recommended to congress that a man be paid an additional month's pay and allowance on discharge in order to tide him over the interim between his discharge and the date he obtains employment; and congress has now passed a bill authorizing a $60 bonus to be paid on discharge to each officer and man who is honorably separated from the service.

Some Dissatisfaction.

Some dissatisfaction has arisen because families find it difficult to immediately see their sons and relatives on their arrival at the port of debarkation. This is due to the fact that public health demands that these men be segregated until they can be disinfected in order to prevent the spread of diseases, such as typhus, trench fever influenza, in the country. Also local conditions connected with the handling and discharge of large bodies of men demand that they be sent after disinfection direct to their demobilization points.

This all seems hard, and being a difficult practical problem, is of necessity entirely devoid of sentiment, which is, however, continually impelling those intrusted with the carrying out of the measures to devise some way of showing the soldier the esteem in which he is held by the country, and of satisfying the just pride which his family possesses in his exploits.

There is a general belief that the emergency has passed, that the war is over, and that there is no reason for keeping troops in France. The war is not over until a treaty of peace ends it.

The emergency cannot be considered over until the last of our troops arrive from France. What could we say to these men and their families if we demobilized all troops in this country and were powerless to care for and return to their home districts the men returning from overseas.

Troops must be kept in France for such army of occupation as may be decreed by the treaty of peace, and for every division held there to clinch the fruits of victory must be kept a certain proportion of men for their supply, to provide measures for their comfort and for their final embarkation.

DESCRIBES HUNS' LAST OFFENSIVE

SIDELIGHTS ON MARCH 'SHOW'

Allied Troops Believed Retreat Was "Part of Some Blooming Strategy, 'Cos the Chaps Next Door Couldn't Hold On."

By PERCY M. SARL.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London.—"Woo-oosh! Bang!"

I looked out of my tent on the morning of March 21, 1918, imagining that some aerial humorist was bombing us. But it was a long-range, ten-inch, high-velocity gun, and a couple more in quick succession, the second shell landing about fifty yards from me, showed that it was no stray round. I realized that the great German offensive had started.

The night before I had joined the Fortieth division artillery, which was lying in "close reserve," just south of Arras. I was hoping for a recuperative period on what was reckoned a fairly "quiet" front.

"Stand by your horses!" brought us all onto the lines. Fortunately, the Boche was shooting by the map and not from observation, or we should have taken little further interest in the "March show." As it was, he dropped about sixty rounds right in the midst of us without doing much damage. The enemy had broken through at Bellecourt and was coming on fast.

Blazing Away at Foe.

"The divisional artillery will come into action at—so-and-so 'map spotting,'" and we were off. But when we got there—well, the cupboard wasn't exactly bare, because just before we reached our objective we came across an 18-pounder section squatting in the open, and blazing away over open sights at the oncoming hordes of Boches.

We dropped back and found a less conspicuous place from which to declare war. Then we had one solid week's hades, such as General Sherman never thought of, or he would have used stronger language about "war." The Germans brought their field guns on so rapidly, and in such numbers, that we were shelled from pillar to post. Our infantry hung on doggedly, and were wiped out, battalion after battalion. Each batch of reserves found their predecessors' positions untenable and were compelled to try to hold a line a bit farther back.

Always in the open, for there was no time to dig oneself in; and when one hillside became too hot for comfort we shifted, either to flank or slightly to the rear. I never saw soldiers so cheerful or determined. Dog-tired, they hung on; and while the great game of "tactics" went on, the whole line having to conform to some unknown situation many miles to a flank, the Third army grumblingly wondered what it was falling back for.

"All Part of Strategy."

If the pessimists who conceded a German victory last March could have seen those "beaten" soldiers retreating, they might have taken heart, because it never occurred to the troops themselves that they were being beaten. The retreat, to them, was all part of "some blooming strategy 'cos the chaps next door couldn't hold on."

Back through Mory, Ervillers, St. Leger, Gommecourt, Courcelles and Bucquoy fell my part of the line, and then we stopped them. March 30 saw about the end of the nightmare as far as we were concerned, and the Fortieth divisional artillery pulled off a regular "boy stood on the burning deck" stunt. My own brigade, the One Hundred and Seventy-eighth brigade royal field artillery, composed of London citizen soldiers mostly, came into action in the open, under heavy fire directed by hostile airplanes and smashed up an attack of three battalions which had been on the front held by a company of the British guards. One battery was practically wiped out, gun after gun being knocked out by concentrations of enemy artillery. I was thankful to find myself when the "Cease fire" order came through.

There were many weary weeks of routine warfare and night alarms. It was between Boisleux-au-Mont and Boiry-St. Martin, about 400 yards from the place where that first ten-inch shell landed on March 21, we stopped the Boche.

There we refitted and planned and prepared for the final triumphal advance of the allies in the ensuing summer and fall.

Many a bride sweeps up the aisle who can't notice three inches of dust six months later.

Are you a success, or can your wife tell if you're telling the truth or not?

A humbug is bad enough but a bedbug is worse.

Just a Difference in Letters.

A young Evansville schoolteacher startled her family by the announcement that she was going to marry as soon as she could persuade some man to propose to her. Her married sister, who was visiting the home, gave her this advice: "You had better stay the way you are. You have your own money and—"

"I don't care a bit for that," retorted the younger girl. "I'm always afraid that I'll die without a husband. I'd like for people to read on my tombstone 'relict' of some one than be just a plain relic of an educational system."—Indianapolis News.

Fruit Lubricant.

A new fruit containing a large percentage of oil has been discovered in the region of Torreon, and is known by the name of "chicopoxtle," says Engineer. Experiments show that 25 per cent of its contents consist of oil of great value in industrial pursuits requiring a lubricant of high quality.

Every man intends to have his own way after marriage, but sometimes his wife relieves him of a false impression.

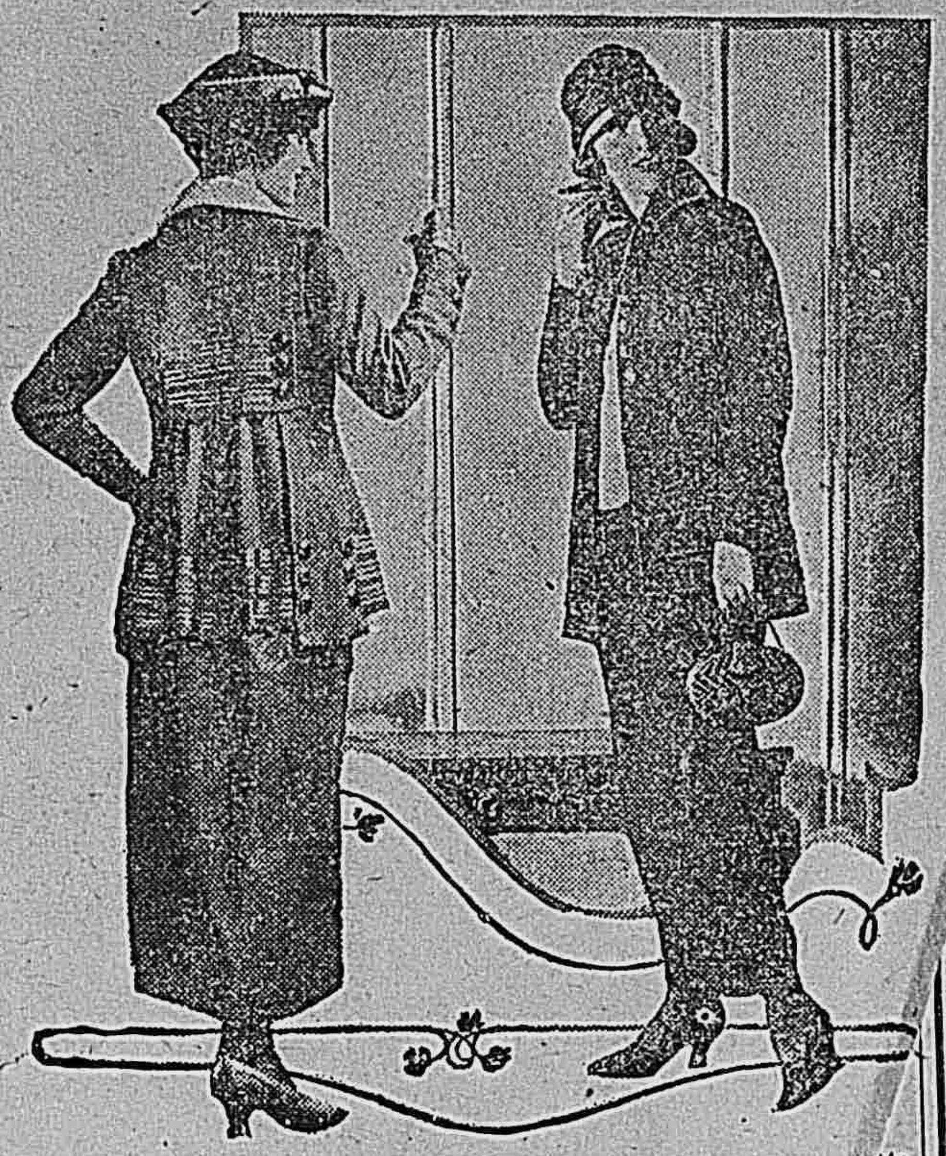
Straight Coat and Narrow Skirt Model



There are several styles in suits that have almost equal chances for popularity this spring and the only way to determine which is the best choice is to try them on. Straight, short coats, opening over vestees, with narrow plain skirts, are universally admired, but they are not universally becoming. If they were there is no doubt but that this type of suit would soon lead all the rest. The test of becomingness must settle the question of choice; no other consideration is so important. But there is quite a wide range in styles to choose from, so that every woman may be confident of finding the particular one that suits her best.

One of the straight-coat-and-narrow-skirt models is shown in the picture and it is an extreme example of this mode, with a skirt rather too narrow to be practical. But to the woman who aspires to look slender it will certainly make a strong appeal, for the skirt is long as well as narrow. The very thin woman cannot consider it. The coat is a pretty model with three wide tucks at the bottom and it opens over a waistcoat of plain ette that is very smart. It has a bone over collar and a row of b buttons down the left side.

Braid and buttons decora pretty suit that is shown built entirely different lines from its c nion in the picture. It has a pla irt wide enough to be comfortabl walking. The coat is made with l ide bodies and a short panel at th nter of the back to which a gathe kirt portion is added. Three grou braid, with three rows in each p ending in bone buttons, disp of the braid and button decorati neat, tailored fashion, on the pan The same decoration on the skirt tion ends in buttons on the side es and this plan is followed out the front. For those who do no e braid or want a change from it styles offer cross-bar and other rangements of pin tucks and grou of wider tucks in the material.

Advance showing of pretty afternoon frocks for summer, reveal many lovely models made of sheer, plain voile. Besides these, there are striped and figured voiles and among them some fine, imported weaves, that are to be reckoned with. The latter are high priced, in fact considerably more expensive than plain georgette. They appear in patterns and color combinations that are very beautiful. But even so, the dress of plain voile or georgette rarely suffers by comparison with a rival made of the figured patterns. The home dress maker will succeed oftener with a plain fabric, especially if she makes a little excursion in designing on her own account.

The frock of plain voile shown in the picture, bespeaks the work of a professional designer who is trained to make the most of fabrics—that is to adapt them to styles in the best way. In this case nothing is used with the voile but a little silk piping, but these simple means proved equal to making a dress of smart distinction and one that is easy enough to copy.

All the sheer fabrics are made up over silk or satin and this frock has an underskirt and bodice of silk. A wide flounce of the voile is set on the underskirt and above it a tunic is accomplished by three hemmed flounces set one above another. These are all narrower at the right than at the left side, so that the tunic is longer at the left side.

The bodice is made in the effect of a little jacket of the voile, bordered with a band of it, set on with a piping of silk. The jacket reveals a vestee, also made of the voile and decorated with cross-bar tucks and the sleeves are set into deep cuffs of the tucked voile. For a girdle a ribbon woven in checkerboard pattern proves an effective bit of craftsmanship with little pendent balls of silk set on the bodice just above it at each side.

Calls for Four and a Half Billion, Says Secretary Glass.

4 3-4 AND 3 3-4 PER CENT

Seventh District's Quota Is $652,500,000—New York's Largest, With $1,350,000,000—There Will Be No Heavy Subscriptions.

Washington, April 15.—Terms of the Victory loan, the last of the Liberty issues, are announced in final form by Secretary of the Treasury Glass. The issuance, starting April 21, will take the form of gold notes which mature in four years and may be redeemed at the option of the government at par and accrued interest after three years.

The secretary calls upon the nation to subscribe a total of $4,500,000,000 which, with the heavy federal tax collections for 1918, has been found ample to meet the treasury's needs to its fiscal year ending June 30.

Two classes of notes will be issued. One, subject to all taxation with the exception of the normal income tax, state or local taxes, will bear 4¾ per cent interest. This is an increase of one-half of 1 per cent per annum over the rate borne by the third and fourth loans.

The second note will bear interest at the rate of 3¾ per cent and will be exempt from all taxation, with the exception of estate and inheritance taxes. Both issues are convertible, one into the other, [illegible] time prior to maturity.

On the Liberty issues, with the exception of the first, the treasury has accepted all oversubscriptions.

The pro rata allotment of the Chicago federal reserve district is $625,500,000. This compares with a quota of $870,000,000 on the fourth loan, to which the district returned total subscriptions of $969,000,000.

The percentage quotas of the twelve federal reserve districts, and the amount of the Victory loan they will be asked to absorb follow:

	Pct. of total.	Amount.
Chicago	14.5	$ 652,500,000

Chicago and Cook county will have a quota of $189,225,000 of the seventh district's allotment.

Illinois outside of Cook county will be called upon to subscribe $84,825,000.

Iowa's quota is $110,925,000; Michigan's, $110,925,000; Indiana, 81,562,500, and Wisconsin, $75,037,500.

OFFICIAL SUMMARY ISSUED IN PARIS GIVING TERMS OF WORLD PEACE PACT

Paris, April 14.—The following official summary of the covenant of the league of nations was issued on Saturday:

"1. The league of nations is founded in order to promote international co-operation and to secure peace. The league will include: (A) The belligerent states named in a document annexed to the covenant; (B) all the neutral states so named, and (C) in the future, any self-governing country whose admission is approved by two-thirds of the states already members of the league.

"A state may withdraw from the league, providing it has kept its obligations to date, on giving two years' notice.

"2. The league will act through an assembly comprising not more than three representatives of each of the member states, each state having only one vote, and a council comprising, for the present, one representative of each of the five great powers and each of four other powers as selected from time to time by the assembly.

"The number of powers of each class represented on the council may be increased by the unanimous consent of the council and a majority of the assembly. Other powers have the right to sit as members of the council during the decision of matters in which they are especially interested.

"In the council, as in the assembly, each state will have only one vote. Both these bodies are to meet at stated intervals (the council at least once a year), and at other times if required; both can deal with any matter that is of international interest or threatens the peace of the world; the decision of both must be unanimous, except in certain specified cases, matters of procedure, for instance, being decided by a majority vote.

"The league will have a permanent secretariat, under a secretary general. The secretariat and all other bodies under the league may include women, equally with men. A permanent court of international justice and various permanent commissions and bureaus are also to be established.

"3. The member states agree:

"(A) To reduce their armaments, plans for such reduction being suggested by the council, but only adopted with the consent of the states themselves, and thereafter not to increase them without the concurrence of the council.

"(B) To exchange full information of their existing armies and their naval and military programs.

"(C) To respect each other's territory and personal independence, and to guarantee them against foreign aggression.

"(D) To submit all international disputes either to arbitration or to inquiry by the council, which latter, however, may not pronounce an opinion on any dispute whose subject matter falls solely within a state's domestic jurisdiction; in no case to go to war till three months after an award, or a unanimous recommendation has been made, and even then not to go to war with a state which accepts the award or recommendation.

"(E) To regard a state which has broken the covenant as having committed an act of war against the league, to break off all economic and other relations with it, and to allow free passage through their territories to the troops of those states which are contributing armed force on behalf of the league. The council is to recommend what amount of force, if any, should be applied by the several governments concerned, but the approval of the latter is necessary. [States not members of the league will be invited to accept the obligations of the league for the purpose of particular disputes, and, if they fail to comply, may be forced.]

"(F) Not to consider any treaty binding till it has been communicated to the league, which will then proceed to publish it; to admit the right of the assembly to advise the reconsideration of treaties and international conditions which do not accord with present needs, and to be bound by no obligations inconsistent with the covenant.

"A state which breaks its agreement may be expelled from the league by the council.

"4. The covenant does not affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe Doctrine, for securing the maintenance of peace.

"5. The former German colonies and the territories of the Ottoman empire are to be administered in the interests of civilization by states which are willing to be mandatories of the league, which will exercise a general supervision.

"6. The member states accept certain responsibilities with regard to labor conditions, the treatment of natives, the white slave traffic, the opium traffic, the arms traffic with uncivilized and semicivilized countries, transit and trade conditions, public health and Red Cross societies.

"7. The league is recognized as the central body interested in co-ordinating and assisting international activities generally.

"8. Amendments to the covenant require the approval of all the states on the council and a simple majority of those in the assembly. States which signify their dissent from amendments thus approved are not bound by them, but, in this case, cease to be members of the league."

Five Persons Killed in Disorders and a State of Siege Is Proclaimed—Machine Guns Fire on the Ministry.

Copenhagen, April 14.—Herr Neuring, war minister in the government of Saxony, was killed at Dresden by disgruntled soldiers to whom the minister had refused a hearing. YANKS MUTINY IN RUSSIA

Michigan Draft Troops Refused to Obey Order to Go to Front—Want to Go Home.

Washington, April 11.—The first mutiny of American troops in the European war is confirmed by advices to the war department from Archangel, Russia. A company of infantry, when ordered to pack for the front, refused to obey. Only one man was arrested, and he was afterward released.

The mutiny was coupled with a demand by the Americans that they be sent home. It was intimated that unless officials here make immediate announcement as to withdrawing the American soldiers the mutiny will become general.

Washington dispatches said the force in the Archangel region is the Three Hundred Thirty-ninth infantry, composed largely of Michigan drafted men. The regiment is commanded by Col. George E. Stewart, a regular army officer.

Heats Your Whole House From One Register
Made of Steel Radiates Heat Three Times as Fast
STEEL FURNACE BODY

Even, clean, healthful heat for the entire house, from one register — no pipes, no bulky cold air returns; no floors or walls to be torn up. These are but a few of the advantages offered by the Quaker Steel Pipeless Furnace. The principle upon which the Quaker operates is simple, yet it is positive and efficient.

The great volume of heated air rises and spreads throughout the house. This creates a vacuum next to the furnace itself which is filled by a constant supply of cool air from the rooms above. This air is heated, purified, moistened and sent back through the house. Thus a continuous circulation of warm, pure, moist air is maintained.

QUAKER STEEL PIPELESS FURNACE

The construction of the Quaker differs from all other Pipeless Furnaces in that the furnace itself is made of steel. This is a wonderful improvement over the cast iron construction—BECAUSE STEEL RADIATES HEAT THREE TIMES AS FAST — hence it supplies three times the heat for the same or less amount of fuel. As there are no joints and as gas cannot penetrate steel there can be no leakage of gas, dust or soot. The Quaker is therefore not only a better heater but a more healthful one.

The Quaker Steel Pipeless Furnace has many other distinct advantages which you should know about. If there is no dealer near you write to us and we will give full information and tell you where you can see a Quaker. Write today:

"The Master Is Risen Indeed"

Fling out your banners, brave toilers; bring lilies to altar and shrine;
Ring out, Easter bells, He is risen; for you is the token and sign;
There's a world moving sunward and God-
ward; ye are called to the front, ye must lead!
Behind are the grave and the darkness; the Master is risen indeed!

—Mary Lowe Dickinson.

EASTER SUNDAY, which in 1919 falls of April 20—it may fall as early as March 22 and as late as April 25—will be celebrated over a large part of the civilized world this year with peculiar significance. In general it may be said that to the Christian nations it is the principal festival of the Christian year, inasmuch as it commemorates the resurrection of Jesus Christ. In the words of Paul: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." "But," he says, "now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that sleep."

History shows that the celebration of a religious celebration at or about the time of the vernal equinox is older than history. In pagan times it marked the dawn of a new year, the end of winter and the approach of spring, the springing of life out of death. [illegible] Nature [illegible] man to celebrate the Easter season. She is full in spring of emblems of the resurrection.

All winter trees stand stripped and bare. The shrubs, the grasses, the flowers sleep in a cold sepulcher of snow. [illegible] in the spring comes the dawn of new life. The snowdrifts melt. The rivers burst their ice bonds. The trees put forth buds. The grasses awake from their slumber and show green. The crocus and the pasque flower break forth into bloom. It is the resurrection time of the visible creation. It is the Easter time of the world. It is nature's answer to the inquiring [illegible] of man.

In consequence Easter is a time of rejoicing, apart from its religious significance. What a gift is life at this time! What joy it is to live! The joy of the [illegible] of the eye; of the beautiful and sublime in nature; of activity and work and overcoming difficulties; of [illegible] and noble aims and of elevated thoughts; of friendship and love; of doing good; of harmonies of music; of worship and prayer—these are some of the joys of life that loom largest in the spring of the year, when death in the natural world is swallowed up in life.

Easter shows the original unity of European nations. It is a word common to all western tongues, but the name stands for the East and comes out of the East. In Sanskrit, Greek and Latin we find the same root that we do in the tongues of the North of Europe—esten, [illegible] and aust—meaning brightness, [illegible] or dawn, the spot from which light comes, the East.

Many things have been combined to make the present Easter. Some of the odd ceremonies of the day are of pagan origin antedating recorded history. For example, the fashion parade which marks the day in large cities undoubtedly had its beginning in the superstition that bad luck for the coming year was the lot of the person failing to put on some single new item of dress. It was many years before the Christian world gave a Christian significance to pagan rites of celebration that it could not root out.

Easter probably derives its Teutonic name from the festival of the goddess Ostara, in Anglo-Saxon Eastre, which the Saxons of old were wont to celebrate about the same season. The Anglo-Saxon name of April was Estormonath, and it is still known in Germany as Ostermonat. With her usual policy the church endeavored to give a Christian significance to such of the rites as could not be rooted out, and in this case the conversion was particularly easy. Joy at the rising of the natural sun and at the awakening of nature from the death of winter became joy at the rising of the sun of righteousness, at the resurrection of Christ from the grave.

The proper time for the celebration of Easter has occasioned no little controversy. In the second century a dispute arose on this point between the eastern and western churches. The great mass of eastern Christians celebrated Easter on the fourteenth day of the first Jewish month, considering it to be equivalent to the Jewish Passover. The western churches celebrated it on the Sunday after the fourteenth day, holding that it was the commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus. The council of Nice (325 A. D.) decided it in favor of the western usage. This, however, only settled the point that Easter ought to be held, not upon a certain day of the month or moon, but on a Sunday. It was debated, at the time of the introduction of the Gregorian calendar, whether Easter should continue to be movable or whether a fixed Sunday, after the 21st of March, should not be adopted. The rule now is that Easter day is always the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after March 21; if the full moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter day is the Sunday after.

The result of this origin, adaptation and regulation of Easter is that pretty much all the world may celebrate the day, and from a wide variety of motives. Whether it happens early or late, Easter always has a relation to spring which time has sanctioned in a curious diversity of ways. In the social sense, Easter unlocks spring. It opens the door to a new season. Fashion has taken the liberty of making it a dividing line over which it likewise takes the liberty of stepping whenever it chooses. In a church sense the day holds the high poetry and profound religious significance which the day derives from the resurrection. Thus from many sides the day acquires a color of new hopes and expectations. The period of Lent culminates in a fervid aspirational celebration. As the church turns from the historic tragedy of death to the hope of new life, so humanity turns from meditation to meet the splendid symbolism of spring. Jerusalem's egg ceremonies today are duplicated in a picturesque variation by children's sports like those that have been held every year on the White House grounds. The opening door means many different things to many different peoples, just as the Great War affected differently the scattered races of the world.

Different From Any Other.

Easter of 1919 in one respect is different from any of its predecessors. It comes at the end of the greatest and bloodiest war of all history. Where other wars have slain hundreds of thousands, the world's war has taken toll of millions. The peoples of earth have been brought face to face with death as never before since the crucified Christ rose from the dead. What will be the effect?

Man has always striven to believe in what Addison [illegible] "this pleasing hope, this fond desire, this longing after immortality." [illegible] now men who have stood ready to [illegible] the greatest of all sacrifices for home and country, and right in the very heart of this writhing vortex of war have had the question brought home to them. The hearts of countless thousands, reaching across the seven seas to those near and dear who have paid the price of victory and sleep "In Flanders fields where poppies grow" and the far-flung battle front, demand an answer.

Philosophy has not been against the immortality of the soul. Science has brought affirmative testimony. Yet but one life has solved this darkest of all mysteries; but one life has ever won the victory over death. And the message of this one victory is: "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore." Will the peoples of the earth believe?

The Easter message is the message of the empty tomb, of the new life, higher and more purposeful. Apparently the world lifts its face toward the morning. Apparently a league of nations if not the league of nations is to usher in a new day. As there was never in all history such need for the message of Easter, apparently never was there such an outreaching for it.

Jerusalem Redeemed at Last.

In one other respect at least Easter of 1919 will be unlike any other in modern times—it will be celebrated in a Jerusalem permanently freed from Turkish misrule after centuries of Moslem occupation. Easter in 1918 saw Jerusalem in possession of the British, General Allenby having made formal entry in December of 1917, but fighting was in progress in all the region round about as well as in Europe, and the fate of the city still hung in the balance.

In a sense the Holy City is the religious capital of the world. It is a holy city for Christian, Jew and Moslem. All three there observe the spring festival in different ways with different ritual, but all with elaborate religious ceremonial. In Easter week under normal conditions business practically ceases and religious ceremonial becomes the dominant interest. To the Moslem Jerusalem is sacred because of the tomb of Moses. To the Jew Jerusalem is the seat of his nation's ancient glory, with a history covering more than 4,000 years. To the Christian Jerusalem is the scene of the world's greatest tragedy—the passion, crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ of Nazareth. Thus Jerusalem has been the meeting place of devout pilgrims from the utmost corners of the world who at Easter time have filled its streets to overflowing.

From the year 385 the Christians of Jerusalem have observed the events of Christ's passion, death and resurrection in complete and dramatic fashion, commemorating each as far as possible on the spot of its occurrence.

Shocking Sacrilege!

He was shown into the parlor and, after looking at the bookcase, he said to the farmer's son, who had received him: "Are these all the books your father has in the house?" "Aye," the boy replied. "Which of them does he use oftenest?" continued the minister. "That ane," said the boy, pointing to a large leather-covered Bible, which seemed to be well worn. The clergyman beamed. "Oh, the Bible? I'm glad to hear that! How often does he use it?" "On Sunday mornin's." "What, only once a week? Well, well! Does he read aloud to you all, or just to himself?" "Na," was the answer. Then there was a solmen hush, and the committee looked askance at their vicar.

"What's the matter?" whispered the clergyman, turning to the chairman.

PEACE IS NEAR, SAYS WILSON

Enemy Called to Sign Treaty, Says Statement by Big Four.

SET APRIL 25 AT VERSAILLES

Foe Must Pay $25,0000,000,000 Gold and $20,000,000,000 in Bonds—Germans May Be Given Opportunity to Discuss Terms.

Paris, April 16.—A statement by President Wilson in behalf of the Council of Four says the questions of peace are so near complete solution that they will be quickly and finally drafted.

The announcement was contained in an official bulletin, which added that the German plenipotentiaries had been invited to meet at Versailles on April 25.

The statement follows:

"In view of the fact that the questions which must be settled in the peace with Germany have been brought so near to complete solution that they can now quickly be put through the final process of drafting, those who have been most constantly in conference about them have decided to advise that the German plenipotentiaries be invited to meet the representatives of the associated belligerent nations at Versailles on April 25.

"This does not mean that the many other questions connected with the general peace settlement will be interrupted or that their consideration which has long been underway, will be retarded.

"On the contrary it is expected that rapid progress will now be made with those questions, so that they may also presently be expected to be ready for final settlement.

"It is hoped that the questions most directly affecting Italy, especially the Adriatic questions, can now be brought to a speedy agreement.

"The Adriatic question will be given for the time precedence over other questions and pressed by continual study to its final stage.

"The settlements that belong especially to the treaty with Germany will in this way be got out of the way at the same time that all other settlements are being brought to a complete formation.

"It is realized that though the process must be followed, all the questions of the present great settlement are parts of a single whole."

One hundred billion gold marks ($25,000,000,000) is the amount Germany must pay the allied and associated governments for losses and damage caused in the war, plus other billions to be determined by a special commission on which Germany is to be represented.

This final conclusion has been re[illegible] writing after weeks of negotiation which took a wide range and involved frequent changes and modifications. The payment of the 100,000,000,000 gold marks is to be divided into three amounts, as follows:

First, twenty billions ($5,000,000,000) within two years.

Second, forty billions ($10,000,000,000) during 30 years beginning in 1921.

Third, forty billions ($10,000,000,000) when a commission shall determine how it shall be done.

Germany must pay the $5,000,000,000 before May 1, 1921. She must also issue immediately to the allied and associated governments $20,000,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds.

The interest on the bonds until 1926 will be either 2 or 3 per cent and after that date will be 5 per cent.

The bonds will be payable in installments during 15 years. They probably will be kept in control of a central commission of the allied and associated governments, so they shall not be marketed in quantities sufficient to break the price.

The exact amount of the issue will be determined later according to the kind of money in which it must be paid. If the money is marks, the sum will be larger than $20,000,000,000 at the rate of exchange before the war, but that is the general nominal sum.

The mixed commission of representatives of the allied and associated governments and of Germany, which shall report before May 1, 1921, will determine what additional damages must be paid.

EASY TO CURE "NAUGHTINESS"

Common-Sense Methods of Dealing With Children Will Always Be Found Effective.

A morbid exaggeration and perversion of the natural desire which all children feel for notice by their elders, is held by Thomson to be the cause of abnormal naughtiness in children. These cases are of essentially the same nature as those of "moral imbecility" in children who are in some degree mentally defective. The proper lines of treatment are clear enough, and when carried out consistently and thoroughly are rapidly and completely successful. They may be summarized as follows: (1) All severe corporal punishment must be stopped—it never does any good. (2) Nobody must ever appear shocked, amused or even surprised at anything a child does. (3) His misdeeds are never to be alluded to, much less described, in his presence; and, lastly, he should be noticed and encouraged in every way when he is good and altogether ignored when he is naughty.—British Journal of Children's Diseases.

TRIBUTE TO YANKEE FIGHTER

Magazine Writer Describes the "Doughboy" as All the World Has Come to Know Him.

George Pattulli, a magazine writer who has been with General Pershing's army in France, has paid a tribute to the American fighting men that is worthy of reproduction in every county in the United States. Says Mr. Pattulli:

"The American soldier is about the finest human specimen on top of the earth—rough and ready, grumbling, never giving up; always able to laugh, even at his own plight; a holy terror in a fight; ruthless to an enemy capable of resistance; generous to a fault to a beaten foe; hating nobody, fearing none; with backbone enough to storm hell, and the gentleness to win a child."

France knows this, England knows it, even Germany has a hazy idea that a Yankee doughboy is a combination of an angel from heaven and a devil from hell. Isn't it about time for Americans to realize the worth of their fighting sons?—Exchange.

The Ever Dependable "Ford"

During the bitter fighting in France in September 1918, when the United States Marines took the heart out of the Prussian Guards, and in fact, out of the whole German Army, and during the wicked fighting at Belleau Woods and vicinity, some twenty Marines captured the little French village of Bouresches. Scarce 200 yards beyond lay the German trenches. As the Germans were driven from the village of Bouresches, their artillery dropped a fierce barage behind the village to make impossible reinforcements being sent to our soldier boys. Our boys fought until their ammunition was exhausted, their food was gone, and they had no water, and still they held the village, and still the barage fell around them, when suddenly out of the hell of fire of the barage a truck broke through bringing water, food and munitions. Upon receiving this, our American "war dogs" proceeded to drive the Germans out of the trenches.

It seems to have fallen to a certain American Motor Car Company that here was an opportunity to do some advertising, and so it ran a full page advertisement in the newspapers recounting the above facts, and then inserting the following line:

"It was a Ford truck that did this glorious work."

Everybody was glad and rejoiced that American industry came in just at time to endorse American courage and heroism.

A manufacturer of another motor truck doubted the statement, and wrote the War Department asking if it wasn't one of their trucks that should have received the glory, and was informed by the War Department that neither their truck or the truck mentioned in the advertisement was entitled to the glory, but that it was a "Ford" truck that showed up just at that particular time. The latter manufacturer advised us of these facts, and we wrote the War Department and the attached correspondence speaks for itself.

Oil From Fruit Stones.

Salad oil is now being made from the kernels of peach, plum, apricot, and cherry stones. The kernels are first separated from the shells by a solution of calcium chloride of magnesium chloride, then washed, dried, and placed under pressure. The bitter taste or odor is removed by aeration or heating.

Fish Values.

By treating fish oil with hydrogen a chemist has produced an oil suitable for food purposes and a solid substance closely resembling lard, which is tasteless.
